Pig Squeals Too Much,
Movie Actress Raffles Him
NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Pearl White, the very blond young woman who falls off skyscrapers and out of aeroplanes whenever Pathé directors must get an extra punch in their five reels, decorated her Bayville, L. I., estate with eighty-two pigs in the spring, but the pig was of melancholy disposition and squealed louder than a phonograph.

Miss White lost sleep and decided to lose the pig. It was not easy. None of the neighbors would take it as a gift and the local butchers offered prices that even a mining picture actress knew were ridiculous. Last Saturday night she put the pig in the hands of a hotelkeeper of Bayville, who raffled it off. Otto Ruppert, a garage keeper, held the lucky ticket and now has the Pearl White pig of pathetic tendencies tied up in his motor barn.
